City Unveils New Website

The City of Bishop has a new website. The website recently went live and will be formally unveiled at the City Council meeting Monday night, 24 June 2013. The website address remains the same, www.ca-bishop.us.

The city website was a home-grown one, developed by city staff and interns over the years. It got a lot of use - about 400 people used it a day - but some found it hard to find what they were looking for and city staff found it hard to maintain. Websites become more important everyday and the city's website has become an important avenue for more and more people to engage their local government. It was time for an update.

The city contracted with Mountain Studio, of Bishop, to develop the new website to better serve citizens, businesses, and visitors while saving staff time. The new site has a completely new look and format dressed up with photographs from 37 Degrees North, a local Bishop photography business. With the new website, you can even find a link to pay your water and sewer bill with your credit card. The new website is already seeing over 700 visits each day. The cost of the new site was spread between all of the city departments. The City of Bishop invites everyone to visit its new website and tell them what you think.

For more information contact City of Bishop Public Works at publicworks@ca-bishop.us or 760-873-8458. Press releases are posted on the city website.
